A joint doctoral program.

APPLICATIONS ARE DUE JANUARY 15.

Adult Development and Aging Ph.D. Program

The University of Akron and Cleveland State University offer a joint doctoral program in the psychology of Adult Development and Aging. This unique program is one of the few Adult Development and Aging Ph.D. programs in the country – and the only one in Ohio.

Psychology (or related) undergraduate majors and individuals who have a master's degree interested in pursuing doctoral training in basic and/or applied research in Adult Development and Aging are encouraged to apply.

QUESTIONS: Call 330-972-8376 or go to uakron.edu/aging or 216-875-9751, csuohio.edu/sciences/psychology/.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

- All ADA graduate students were fully funded (tuition + stipend) in 2014-15
- Successful job placement for all doctoral graduates of the program (2014 and 2015)
- Link with Cleveland and Akron area medical and research institutes
- Be prepared to work in various roles in research, teaching, and applied settings
- Obtain training in the use of such psychophysiological measures as electrodermal activity, electrocardiogram, pupillometry and more

RESEARCH TRAINING: The need for expert researchers in adult development and aging is at an all-time high due to dramatic shifts in global demographics toward older societies. You'll work with experienced, full-time faculty to develop and carry out relevant research projects.

CURRICULUM: You'll take equal amounts of coursework at each institution, covering research methods/design, adult biobehavioral functioning, and adult psychosocial functioning. Your coursework will also include advanced research seminars.

Akron–Cleveland Area

Northeast Ohio is a dynamic region with much to offer. Whether visiting Cuyahoga Valley National Park, seeing the world-class Cleveland Orchestra or downhill skiing a mere 20 minutes from Akron, there's something to appeal to almost every interest. Museums, zoos, Lake Erie, pro sports and more, all within a short distance.
